

Jusserand Will Quit U.S.; Treaty Defeat Cause

Retirement of Dean of Foreign Diplomats Result of Political Storm in France, It Is Declared

Course Bitterly Attacked

Charged That Ambassador Failed to Interpret Correctly Sentiment Here

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—"The Public Ledger" says this morning: WASHINGTON, June 13.—Julius Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, will not return to his post in the United States after his trip to France, for which preparations are now being made at the French Embassy. The dean of the foreign diplomatic corps in Washington, who has served his country in the United States for eighteen years, has become one of the central figures in the political storm that has swept France as the result of the defeat of the treaty in the United States Senate, and his retirement has been determined upon as necessary to help quell the tumult. Officials of the French Embassy have refused consistently to describe the shifting events in France brought about by what the average Frenchman believes to be the studied indifference of this country to the fate of her late ally. Only the attaches of the embassy, and not all of them, are aware of the fact that M. Jusserand is not to come back to this country as the envoy of his native land, and it is understood that the move, when made, will be in the form of a voluntary announcement by the veteran diplomat that he wishes to be relieved of the burdens incident to a public career.

Opposition Develops at Home. M. Jusserand celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday anniversary last winter. The last forty-four years of his life have been spent in the diplomatic service and in such meritorious fashion that even his bitterest enemies cannot deny him the right of stepping aside gracefully for a younger man. The trend of opinion in France which is said to have led to the condemnation of M. Jusserand has its origin indirectly in the fate of the treaty of peace and the league of nations before the United States Senate. Leaders in French politics have been making the charge that M. Jusserand and Andre Tardieu, formerly High Commissioner to the United States, failed to inform their country and people of the limitations of the Presidential power in so far as treaty-making is concerned, and that France therefore was lulled into a sense of false security and given to believe that the signature of the Treaty of Versailles by President Wilson furnished the safeguards against future aggression and sympathetic assistance that the war-ravaged country needed. Failed to Interpret Sentiment. The men who are now attacking the course followed by M. Jusserand say that he failed to interpret correctly the sentiment of this country and took the attitude that Mr. Wilson would be able to carry his threat that the treaty and league should be ratified as he had brought them from Paris, without the slightest change or modification. The Senate impasse, which has prevented not only American participation in the matters growing out of the treaty but also has delayed many of the functions that the Allies are now preparing to carry out, has inflamed the French people against the men that they believe contributed to the situation, and the reputation of M. Jusserand in the foreign service would be a disastrous political move.

The removal of M. Jusserand from the diplomatic service will be a distinct loss not only to the diplomatic colony but to social Washington as well. M. Jusserand, an American by birth, was Miss Elise Richards before her marriage, and has been one of the most active and successful of the French diplomats in this country. He was ambassador to the United States from 1914 to 1918, and during that time he was in the forefront of the French diplomatic corps in Washington, who has served his country in the United States for eighteen years, has become one of the central figures in the political storm that has swept France as the result of the defeat of the treaty

Albanian Rebels Routed by Italians After Sharp Fight

Serbian Wearing American Uniforms Said to Have Joined Insurgents; Scutari May Be Evacuated

ROME, June 13.—Italian Alpine troops have cleared the Avlona front of Albanian insurrectionists by violent counter-attacks, according to advices received to-day, which declare the Italian troops were fired on from the rear by residents of Avlona. The Italians arrested and deported more than 1,000 Mussulman Albanians. In reprisal an Albanian chieftain is reported to have shot a number of Italian prisoners. The dispatches say that on June 6 Albanian rebels commenced isolated attacks in the region of Kanina, Gjirokastra and Tepeleni, to the south and southwest of Avlona. The Italian forces opposed desperate resistance, giving way only before the superior strength of the enemy. The garrisons of Tepeleni and Gjirokastra capitulated, but the other garrisons retreated. With the fall of Tepeleni and Gjirokastra to the Albanians seventy officers and 800 men of the garrisons were taken prisoner. "The Albanian insurgents have been strengthened by American-equipped Serbians wearing American uniforms," says the "Idea Nazionale," adding "the offensive by Serbian and Jugo-Slav troops aims to chase Italy from the Balkans."

It is expected the Italians will be obliged to evacuate Antivari, as the Serbians have occupied the railway. The Serbians are also threatening the Italian garrison of Scutari. Avlona was attacked after the delivery of an ultimatum demanding evacuation by the Italians in twenty-four hours, but the insurgents were repulsed at the point of the bayonet, losing 200 killed and 1,000 taken prisoner. The Italian casualties were small, but several minor Italian contingents were surrounded and some captured. The Italian General, Cavallo, was captured in bitter fighting which occurred in the outskirts of the city. Italian warships bombarded the insurgents and razed the villages of Dukati, Trias, Radina and Kanina.

The "Corriere d'Italia" says that after the recall of General Raimondo recently the command of Avlona was entrusted to General Bobbio. A semi-official statement issued to-day, describing the Albanian attack on Avlona, admits that two Italian detachments at Itri 115 and Gjiro, after heroic resistance, surrendered to overwhelming forces. The statement, however, adds that a great attack on Avlona on June 11, which was accompanied by a revolt of the Mussulman inhabitants of the town, was repulsed with heavy losses to the rebels. The Italian casualties according to the statement, did not exceed ten killed and fifty wounded. Reinforcements are now arriving and the critical phase of the situation has been overcome, the statement asserts.

Two Wounded in Another Stabbed One Is a Prisoner

Gunman's Victim Drops as Theater Crowd Scatters; Policeman's Bullet Halts Fugitive in Street Chase

There was a sudden burst of revolver shots about 10:45 o'clock last night in Rivington Street, near the Bowery. Persons emerging from a motion picture theater nearby sought shelter behind stoops and elevated pillars. One man, Rosario Demario, of 217 Bowery, the victim of the bushwhacker, fell with a bullet in his back, after several others had gone wild of the mark. Anthony J. Fater, and acting detective sergeant, heard the shooting as he stroled up the Bowery and made for the sound of the shots. He approached Rivington Street from the south a man darted from that thoroughfare into the Bowery with a revolver in his hand and ran north. Fater shouted to him to halt and when his command was ignored sprinted in pursuit.

The fugitive menaced the policeman with his revolver and when the gesture failed to daunt him, pulled the trigger. The bullet sang over Fater's head and he drew his own revolver and fired. The bullet caught the fleeing man in the back, but though he faltered at the shock, he still ran on, firing again at his pursuer and again missing him.

Fater took another shot at his man, hitting him this time in the leg and bringing him down. The revolver fell from his hand as he fell and Fater flung himself upon him, thrusting the weapon out of his grasp. The prisoner said he was Angelo De Rocco, of 217 Bowery. Both he and Demario were taken to Gouverneur Hospital, De Rocco with charges of felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan law against him.

Half an hour after De Rocco and Demario had been admitted to the hospital, Salvatore Campo was found unconscious in his room, on the second floor of 217 Bowery, with five knife wounds in his body and scalp. One of the wounds had nearly severed his right ear. Campo was taken under guard to Gouverneur Hospital to join his companions.

The police say that the affair in which the three men were concerned is the result of a long standing quarrel among the boarders at 217 Bowery, where De Rocco lived on the first floor, Campo on the second and Demario on the third. According to the police Campo was walking with De Rocco last night when the pair met Demario and hostilities started.

HARRIMAN NATIONAL BANK Fifth Avenue and 44th Street NEW YORK Old Ideas and New The untutored idea that a bank is merely a place to deposit money for safekeeping should long ago have become obsolete. A bank has more important functions to perform, and if banking is the hand-maiden of commerce, banks are its backbone. One of the prime functions of a bank is to collect the scattered capital of the country whether in the form of savings or otherwise, concentrate it, and turn it out again in the form of credit. This credit goes into the development of every field of industry. Thus, willy-nilly, a depositor of the Harriman National Bank becomes an important factor in the progress of the country. Even those to whom by their own sad confession banking is a "mystery" certainly cannot read the daily newspapers with any degree of intelligence without realizing this function of a bank. It is brought out most clearly today in the great loans of governments, which, were it not for this unique function of banks, efficiently performed, could never be floated. It is the same concentration of capital, plus intelligently directed and co-operative effort, that made England the mistress of the world's commerce and ruler of its finance, and the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street, her daughter, the great banking power of the world. Here is a lesson for us, for trade follows the dollar, and the foreign trade which we possessed ourselves of, which we hope to expand, and expect to hold against all comers, will depend upon our initiative, unity, and banking intelligence.
